OUR SPEAKER: JERRY DON THOMPSON

Jerry Don Thompson

Jerry Thompson has published over twenty books and monographs on the Civil War and the history of the Southwest, as well as twenty-eight articles, five book introductions, twenty-three encyclopedia articles, and over one hundred book reviews. His books and publications have received the Barry Goldwater Award from the Arizona Historical Society, the Gaspar Perez de Villagra Award from the Historical Society of New Mexico, the La Bahia Award from the Sons of the Republic of Texas, a Citation from the San Antonio Conservation Society, the A. M. Pate, Jr. Award from the Fort Worth Civil War Round Table, the T. R. Fehrenback Award from the Texas Historical Association, and the Earl Davis Award from Hill College.

Jerry served six years as Dean of the College of Arts and Humanities at Texas A&M International University and in 2001 was named Regents Professor by the Texas A&M University System. He received his Bachelors Degree in History from Western New Mexico University, his MA in History from the University of New Mexico and his Doctorate in History from Carnegie Mellon University. His recently published Civil War to the Bloody End: The Life and Times of Major General Samuel Peter Heintzelman (Texas A&M University Press, 2006) has been nominated for the Lincoln Prize. His biography of Juan Cortina--Cortina: Defending the Mexican Name in Texas--is due out from Texas A&M University Press in 2007.

Thompson is presently working on a book on the Civil War in New Mexico Territory, as well as editing the Civil War letters of Capt.

Manuel Yturri and Capt. Joseph de la Garza.

Jerry's topic will address the biography of General Heintzelman but specifically will focus on Union failures in the 1862 Peninsula Campaign.

BOOK RAFFLE by Mike Pierce

Books to be raffled in March are: Drawn with the Sword by James M. McPherson, Ulysses S. Grant by Josiah Bunting III, and Brink of Destruction edited by Randall Bedwell, all three of which are being donated by Jim Godlove; Portraits of the Civil War by William C. Davis, donor anonymous; JEB Stuart by John Thomason, donated by Karen Stone; The Traitor President: Jefferson Davis (VHS format) and Zouaves! (VHS format), both from the History Channel and both donated by Bruce Greek; and four (4) assorted Civil War Magazines, donated by Karen Stone.

Raffle tickets are an amazing 50 cents each or eight for only $3.00. Odds of winning a selection of your choice are quite high, so please participate and help your Round Table's funding requirements!

QUIZ QUESTION by Jim Godlove

In March, 1862, President Lincoln issued "President's General War Order Number 2," which appointed various corps commanders to Gen. George B. McClellan's Army of the Potomac. General Samuel P. Heintzelman was appointed commander of which corps?

TWIGGS SURRENDER RE-ENACTING EVENT by Mike Pierce

Approximately one hundred re-enactors from all over Texas congregated at the Alamo on February 10, 2007 to re-create the 146th anniversary of this little-known historical event.

Prior to the outbreak of the American Civil War, the Alamo in San Antonio, Texas was the location of a command post for the US Army and a major storehouse for military supplies for the Texas frontier. In February, 1861, Colonel Ben McCulloch (soon promoted to General), who was responsible for an eventual one thousand men of the Texas militia, surrounded this Federal garrison at the Alamo complex and demanded the surrender of its personnel and equipment. After weeks of delaying tactics, the US Army General Twiggs eventually negotiated a surrender of his overwhelmingly outnumbered garrison of 163 men, who were allowed to evacuate Texas without bloodshed. However, all of the military supplies and equipment were turned over intact to the new and still peaceful Texas government. The bombardment of Ft. Sumter commenced just a few short weeks later in April, 1861, ushering in the “shootin’ phase” of the war.

The ever-fascinating aspect of this relatively minor confrontation is that had General Twiggs resisted, the “shootin’ phase” of the war would have begun two months earlier than it actually did. In that case, we would all have had yet another reason to “Remember the Alamo!” Twiggs’s surrender is commemorated during most years in February at the Alamo.

Twiggs’s Surrender Re-Enactors

Mike would like to credit Edward Jablonski, Civil War historian and re-enactor, with contributing this article to enrich our knowledge of this engagement.

MADISONVILLE RE-ENACTOR NEWS by Mike Pierce

On February 11 Civil War re-enactors gathered for the event in Madisonville, Texas. The occasion was marked by infantry, cannon, and gunnery at Lake Madison Park. The Civil War engagement was deemed the battle for El Camino Real and came to life within just feet of an excited crowd. And though there was not actually a battle of El Camino Real in the Civil War, the re-enactors of this event prided themselves on providing a “period-correct” battle that day, all the way down to the uniforms and munitions of the period.

An Update on the Museum of the Confederacy by Lynda Crist

The Museum of the Confederacy has undergone a detailed study over the past several years in regard to declining visitation and decreased financial revenues. The results from the analysis were released last fall and are available on the Museum’s website at @ www.moc.org.

The Museum's trustees determined that the White House of the Confederacy would retain its current location and the Museum's collections would be relocated. At present, the Museum is in the midst of discussions regarding several potential sites wherein its various collections could be relocated.

The possibility exists that the museum will be renamed. As of this point in time, there has not been a decision to rename the museum. Any decision that is made will be dependent on the new location.

RECENT DONOR CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE ROUND TABLE by Mike Pierce and/FUND RAISING IDEAS by Charlie Mitchell

Mike Pierce would like fellow Round Tablers to know that our group is the recent recipient of extraordinary largesse by MaryJo Carter, widow of Joseph D. Carter, of three boxes full of Civil War books, magazines, and pamphlets.

We are very grateful to MaryJo for her thoughtful gift to our membership, and we encourage all of our members to follow her example in making donations to provide learning opportunities for current and future followers of the history of this period.

Mike and his wife Linda and Charlie Mitchell have expressed the desire to know if our Round Tablers have an interest in establishing a Civil War book and souvenir store or in lieu of this perhaps a raffle sell-off of as many as 500 civil war magazines in Charlie's possession at the present time.

Is there interest in supporting a Civil War Bookstore or Raffle? You tell us! Feel free to contact Mike, mpierce1@houston.rr.com and Charlie, cdmoggie@sbcglobal.net with your ideas and or contributions to the project.

CIVIL WAR PRESERVATION TRUST RESCUES 1,300 ACRES OF HALLOWED GROUND IN 2006 by Karen Stone

The Civil War Preservation Trust (CWPT), with 70,000 members, is the largest nonprofit battlefield preservation organization in the United States. Its mission, to preserve our country's remaining Civil War battlefields, has resulted in the saving of more than 23,500 acres of hallowed ground nationwide.

In 2006, the organization permanently protected 1,329 acres of hallowed ground at sixteen different Civil War battlefields in nine states. Overall, the CWPT has protected 26,652 acres of core battlefield at ninety-six sites in eighteen states. Membership information regarding the CWPT is available on their website at www.civilwar.org.

Topping the list of 2006 accomplishments for the organization is the two hundred and eight acre Slaughter Pen Farm in Spotsylvania County, VA. With a $12 million price tag, the property associated with the December 13, 1862 Battle of Fredericksburg is the single most expensive battlefield preservation effort in American history.

According to the President of the CWPT, Jim Lighthizer, Slaughterhouse Pen Farm is considered to be the spot where the Battle of Fredericksburg was won and lost. He has stated that five Medals of Honor were awarded for valor shown on this property.

Second in importance of 2006 contributions by the CWPT is the clearing of the way to acquire the remaining seventy-six acres of the Chancellorsville First Day Battlefield. In 2004, the organization was able to acquire one hundred forty acres of the First Day Battlefield east of historic Lick Run.

Thirdly, the CWPT saw the achievement of its efforts, along with those of other national and regional preservation groups, toward the defeat of the proposed five thousand slots casino near East Cavalry Field at Gettysburg.

And finally, the organization achieved fruition of its conservation efforts during the year of the following sites: 6.5 acres at Mine Creek in Kansas, 1 acre at Munfordville and 54 acres at Perryville in Kentucky, 58 acres at Champion Hill in Mississippi, 70 acres at Wilson's Creek in Missouri, 299 acres at Bentonville in North Carolina, 105 acres at Gettysburg in Pennsylvania, 8 acres at Fort Donelson in Tennessee, and, in Virginia, 8 acres at Brandy Station; 74 acres at Chancellorsville; 208 acres at Fredericksburg; 1 acre at the John Meigs death site in Rockingham County; 200 acres at Port Republic; 6 acres at Second Deep Bottom; and 170 acres at Trevilian Station, followed by 59 acres at Shepherdstown in West Virginia. WOW!
